

3D Thinking Update

The math edit has been completed – and so has the index. The cover seems to be on the right track but am waiting for the next visual. I think there might be one last round to make sure that all the editorial and design changes have been made correctly. So fingers crossed that the book will be ready for the printer very soon. We're still on track for the Spring 2018 launch.

Have been developing different types of workshop that might compliment the book – as well more in the lecture series.